Sustainable Forest Management certification

What forest certification delivers

Sustainable Forest Management

Chain of Custody

Delivers sustainable “forest based” raw material that is:

- legal: wood is harvested in compliance with local legislation and international agreements
- from well managed forests: are safeguarding environmental, social & economic values
- traceable: the raw material supply chain is verified from the forest to the finished products

What is Group Forest Certification?

A mechanism to bring together multiple forest owners to pursue certification:

- sharing roles, responsibilities & costs
- joining under the umbrella of a common management structure

- A woman with blonde hair, wearing a green vest over a grey long-sleeved shirt, is crouching in a forest. She is smiling and looking towards the camera. In front of her is a large, woven wicker basket filled with various types of mushrooms, including boletes and porcini. The forest floor is covered with dry, brown leaves. A blue and white plaid cloth is lying on the ground to the right of the basket. The background shows more trees and foliage.
- Every year are sold 60.000 daily tickets
 - The single ticket costs 20 euro

Lessons learnt in 15 years of NWFP certification

- Think long term and dare to take strategic choices in order or to integrate either to increase income/profit of the firm
- Establish partnerships with different actors not only linked to forestry chain
- Collaborate with those above actors
- Joining an association or union helps to lead new markets and to reach information to identify innovative processing techniques and processed products (adding value function) needed by different consumers/customers/clients (knowledge of the markets)
- Diversify products in order to de-seasonalise selling period and meet the most diversified consumers/customers/clients
- Qualify products through services
- Ensure and enhance quality of the products (and services linked) through certification of the sustainable management of forest originating NWFPs assuring the traceability along the manifold chains/actors processing it

Thank you for your attention
